Hanover man charged with child porn possession

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier staff writer

A 30-year-old Hanover man has been arrested on felony charges of possession of child pornography and child exploitation based on an investigation by the Indiana State Police Internet Crimes Against Children unit.

Kenneth "Tray" Whalen III was taken into custody Thursday and held at the Jefferson County Jail facing charges of child exploitation-child pornography, a Level 5 felony, and possession of child pornography, a Level 6 felony.

Detectives with the Indiana State Police Internet Crimes Against Children unit arrested Whalen after receiving a cyber tip from the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children and conducting an investigation that included a search warrant executed on Facebook and at Whalen's residence.

The tip police received included Whelan's Facebook screen name and that led investigators to Whalen's home near Hanover. Information gathered during the investigation, along with the subsequent search of his home and computer, resulted in the arrest and Whalen was taken into custody without incident.

The original tip was reported to the national center by Facebook in May after the online social media site discovered videos and/or photo files that are believed to have been uploaded or received by Whalen from two other Facebook users between December 2018 and May 2019. Files recovered so far — about 13 gigabytes — depict videos or photos of prepubescent males and females engaged in pornography with adult males.

The case was investigated by the Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force, a unit that includes officers from federal, state and local agencies who conduct undercover online investigations, respond to complaints regarding children being enticed or sexually exploited via the Internet, conduct community education programs and monitor the Internet for the bartering in child pornography.

The Indiana State Police Internet Crimes against Children unit and Indiana State Police were assisted by units from the Hanover Police Department and the United States Secret Service.

BRIGHTER FUTURE FOR RIVERWALK

Conversion to LED bulbs along Vaughn

Trev Snyder (right), electrician for the City of Madison, worked Tuesday to convert a street lamp along Vaughn Drive from metal halide bulbs to LED. He said the section along Vaughn Drive is the city's last in a project to replace all 109 street lamps on Vaughn Drive and all 98 lamps on Main Street with the more efficient LEDs, which use just a fraction of the electricity. Swapping out the metal halides, which generate more heat than LEDs and therefore use more energy, requires removing the ballast and refitting posts for the LED fixtures. The work is part of a project to implement more efficient lighting that also includes City Hall, Brown Gym, Bicentennial Park and the city Public Works buildings through a rebate program with Duke Energy. The LEDs, rated to last 50,000 hours, produce a somewhat whiter light than metal halide, making the darkest areas of the riverfront a bit brighter and potentially safer for pedestrians. The differences in lighting between the two bulbs can be seen in the photos above. (Courier staff photos by Mark Campbell)

3 closures of major roads ahead next week

Courier staff report

Three closures of major roadways serving the Jefferson County area are ahead next week.

Multiple closures for several months are scheduled along S.R. 7 in Jennings County for box culvert replacement and maintenance. S.R. 7 will be closed at one location at a time.

The road is scheduled to close on or after Monday, July 29, 3.16 miles north of the Jefferson/Jennings County line (south of Turkey Run) for box culvert repair and maintenance. The closure will be the first of four along S.R. 7, south of Vernon.

The road will close for approximately 30 days at each of the following locations, moving south to north. Crews will move to the next location after completion of work at each culvert.

- 3.16 miles north of Jefferson/Jennings County line, south of Turkey Run (maintenance/repair)
- 3.51 miles north of Jefferson/Jennings County line at Turkey Run (replacement)
- 11.67 miles north of S.R. 250, just south of Crosley Fish and Wildlife Area (replacement)
- 5.71 miles north of Jefferson/Jennings County line, approximately one mile south of S.R. 3/S.R. 7 split (maintenance/repair)

The official state detour for each closure is S.R. 3 to S.R. 256. Motorists are encouraged to plan ahead and use caution near work zones. The project is expected to be complete by Oct. 31, 2019. All work is weather dependent.

S.R. 250 to close July 29 to August 1 for culvert replacements.

S.R. 250 is scheduled to close from S.R. 7 to S.R. 3 beginning Monday, July 29, through Thursday, August 1, for culvert replacement work. The road will close daily from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. while work is completed.

Work will resume where crews left off earlier in July, about four miles west of S.R. 7 in Jefferson County and will move toward S.R. 3, near the Jefferson/Jennings County line. County roads will be accessible to local traffic only.

The official state detour for the closure is S.R. 256. All work is weather dependent.

Rykers Ridge Road closure will begin Monday, July 29th and is expected to take about two weeks. The closure will be between the addresses of 2282 N. Rykers Ridge Road and 2360 N. Rykers Ridge Road. The road will be closed for culvert replacement.

Indiana drownings up this year; none wore life jackets

Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS — The 34 drownings in Indiana public waterways this year exceed last year's number at the same time, according to Capt. Jet Quillen of the Department of Natural Resources. "We're a little bit higher than last year at this time," Quillen said. "We will see them drop off in September. The boating season is the big busy time on the water — from Memorial Day to Labor Day." There were 53 drownings in Indiana all of last year. Those figures only include drownings in rivers, ponds, lakes and reservoirs. The numbers don't account for deaths in private pools. Quillen said none of those who drowned were wearing life jackets. "We understand they can be hot and bulky, but life jackets save lives," he said. "The dangers of water are underestimated." The DNR advises people to wear life jackets, go swimming with someone, and avoid flooded or fast moving waterways.

Broken Statehouse fountain being fixed

INDIANAPOLIS — A $1.1 million fountain outside the Indiana Statehouse is being repaired after not working since 2017. The fountain was the centerpiece of a Statehouse plaza project advanced by then-Gov. Mike Pence to mark Indiana's 2016 bicentennial of statehood. It operated through the summer of 2017 but broke over the next winter. Indiana Department of Administration commissioner Lesley Crane said it took time to find a vendor to repair the control panel. The fountain could be operational again by mid-August. The fountain includes water jets, color lighting and a cascading front. Crane says the control panel repair is costing $46,000, while a second company will reinstall it.

Mental health treated in trooper-dad shooting

GRANGER — A boy who authorities say shot and wounded his state-trooper father because he was upset that his parents took away his video games will get mental health treatment at a secure facility. The St. Joseph County prosecutor's office says the 12-year-old boy was sentenced this week in juvenile court after pleading guilty and will be monitored by the court until it's determined he can be released. The boy was 11 at the time of the February shooting. Investigators have said he used his father's service weapon to shoot him once in the buttocks. They say the boy got the gun from the off-duty trooper's locked police vehicle outside their home in Granger, near South Bend. The Associated Press isn't naming the trooper to avoid identifying his son.

Life in prison sought in boy's starvation

BLOOMINGTON — A couple accused of starving a 12-year-old boy to death could face life in prison if they're convicted in his death. Monroe County prosecutors have filed a court notice citing two aggravating circumstances to support life in prison without parole for 32-year-old Luis Eduardo Posso Jr. and 25-year-old Danaya Medina-Flores if they're convicted of murder. Prosecutors allege the couple tortured and confined Eduardo Posso before his May death in a Bloomington hotel room. The boy died after being denied food over a period of time while restrained with cords and padlocked chains. He was the elder Posso's son and Medina-Flores' stepson. The former Myakka City, Florida, couple is being held without bond on murder, battery and other charges ahead of their scheduled fall trials.

Motorists warned of possible impersonator

CROWN POINT — Authorities say a possible police impersonator may have stopped two female motorists in northwestern Indiana in recent weeks. Indiana State Police say a motorist was stopped on southbound Interstate 65 near Crown Point the night of July 8 by a man in a black or dark blue Ford Crown Victoria with red and blue lights inside. She told state police the man didn't identify himself as an officer and yelled at her for allegedly speeding. The motorist says the man took her driver's license and registration back to his car and told her she'd be mailed a ticket. Separately, the Portage Police Department says a motorist reported being stopped by a similar vehicle July 17. State police released a sketch of a suspect and are seeking tips from the public.

300-year sentence in killing of 4

FORT WAYNE — A man who pleaded guilty to four counts of murder in the deaths of four people including his unborn child was sentenced to 300 years in prison. Marcus Dansby, who also pleaded guilty to one count of attempted murder and a sentencing enhancement for using a gun to commit the crimes, was sentenced Thursday in Allen County Court. In the plea agreement, the prosecutor agreed to dismiss the death penalty and not seek a sentence of life without parole for 23-year-old Dansby. Dansby pleaded guilty to the fatal September 2016 shootings and stabbings of 18-year-old Traeven Harris, 37-year-old Consuela Arrington, 18-year-old Dajahiona Arrington and the near-term fetus that the younger Arrington was carrying. A fourth person, 14-year-old Trinity Hairston, was shot and stabbed but survived.

Hundreds expected at temple groundbreaking

COLUMBUS — Hundreds of people are expected to attend a groundbreaking next week for a Hindu temple. The Hindu Society of Southern Indiana said the August 3 groundbreaking on Columbus' west side will be open to the public. Organizers expect about 700 people of various faiths at the event, including Mayor Jim Lienhoop. The 8,000-square-foot temple will cost an estimated $1.2 million and is expected to be completed by next spring. Hindu leaders say local believers currently meet for religious services and activities in a house and at the Unitarian Universalist Congregation of Columbus. The temple, which will accommodate about 400 people, will be located next door to that church in the city.

Man dies weeks after shooting by tossed gun

KENDALLVILLE— A man has died weeks after being shot in the stomach by gun that was tossed onto a bed. An obituary for 20-year-old Jerremmy Hall said the Kendallville man died Tuesday at a Fort Wayne hospital where he was taken after the July 6 shooting. Kendallville Police Chief Rob Wiley confirmed Hall's death. Police say an adult was handling a gun in a Kendallville apartment when the weapon was tossed onto a bed and it discharged, shooting Hall in the abdomen. The findings from an autopsy planned for Friday will be forwarded to Noble County prosecutors. Wiley says no charges have been filed in the shooting but the investigation is ongoing. A preliminary investigation suggested the shooting was accidental.

Accused in dairy abuse in immigration custody

KENTLAND — A man accused of abusing calves at an Indiana dairy farm that's a popular agritourism destination is in federal immigration custody. Newton County jail officers transferred Edgar Gardozo-Vasquez, 36, to U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement custody on July 19 after he posted bond. ICE spokeswoman Nicole Alberico said the Mexican national will remain in ICE custody pending the outcome of accusations that he's in the country illegally. Gardozo-Vasquez is one of three former Fair Oaks Farms employees accused of abusing calves at the farm. They were charged with felony torturing or mutilating a vertebrate animal and misdemeanor animal cruelty after an animal rights group released undercover video showing calves being thrown, kicked and otherwise abused by workers.

9,200-head hog farm moves forward

PERU — A proposed 9,200-head hog farm is moving forward despite opposition from residents who say it will hurt property values and environmentalists worried about its proximity to a large reservoir. Farm Service Agency loan specialist Michael Priest says the project's two barns have received all required permits from the Indiana Department of Environmental Management. Each will house up to 4,620 wean-to-finish pigs. Boss Hog Barns and Snowhill Ridge plan to build the farm in Miami County about 4 miles from Mississinewa Reservoir and the Miami State Recreation Area. Environmentalists worry farm runoff could impact both sites. Some residents fear the smell of hogs and manure will harm property values and the farm will impact their health and compromise critical water resources.

New on-land Gary casino targets 2020

GARY — The owner of a casino is targeting the end of next year to complete its move from Lake Michigan to an on-land location in Gary. Executives of Indianapolis-based Spectacle Entertainment say they hope to start construction this year on currently vacant land along Interstate 80/94 and open the new casino on Dec. 31, 2020. The Gary Plan Commission voted unanimously Tuesday to approve the casino project. Spectacle's plans include building a hotel and parking garage within two or three years. Spectacle reached a deal this month to switch from the current Majestic Star casino names to Hard Rock Casino Gary. Spectacle vice president John Keeler says Hard Rock's management of the casino will help it compete with planned new Chicago casinos.

Husband, wife killed in domestic dispute

FRANKFORT — Kentucky State Police say a domestic dispute left two people dead in what may be a murder-suicide. News outlets report Donna J. Hollon, 54, and Larry W. Hollon, 51, were both fatally shot Wednesday. Kentucky State Police Trooper Bernis Napier said authorities received a call about a domestic dispute. The incident appeared to be a murder-suicide. Larry Hollon was dead at the scene and Donna Hollon died at the hospital. The couple's daughter, Daisy Hollon, 18, also was hospitalized with minor injuries. An autopsy to determine official causes of death was scheduled Thursday. State police also are investigating similar deaths in Bremen. They said Jon Tracy Markwell appears to have shot his wife, Darcy Markwell, on Friday before turning the gun on himself.

Jobless rates fall in 55 counties, up in 51

FRANKFORT — Officials say unemployment rates fell in 55 of the state's counties and rose in 51 others between June 2018 and June 2019. The Kentucky Center for Statistics says rates stayed the same in 14 counties. Officials say Woodford County had the state's lowest jobless rate at 3.4 percent, followed by Boone, Oldham, Shelby and Spencer counties at 3.8 percent each. Fayette County was next at 3.9 percent. Bourbon, Campbell, Kenton and Scott counties had 4 percent rates each. The state's highest unemployment rate was 12.4 percent in Magoffin County, followed by Lewis County at 9.3 percent and Carter County at 9.1 percent. Elliott and Harlan counties each had an 8.8 percent rate. Leslie County

Daleville to issue revocation notice to 2 virtual schools

By REBECCA R. BIBBS
(Anderson) Herald Bulletin

DALEVILLE – The Daleville Community Schools board of trustees on Thursday voted unanimously in a special meeting to issue notices of revocation of charters for two virtual schools it authorizes.

However, the notices are only the start of a process and does not mean Indiana Virtual Schools and Indiana Virtual Pathways Academy are expected to close immediately, Daleville Superintendent Paul Garrison stressed.

"We fully expect and demand that IVS and IVPA will fulfill all their legal, contractual, professional, and moral obligations until date of closure, whatever the vote may be tonight, especially as related to the students," he said.

The district called the special meeting after being notified last week that the schools no longer were operational, Garrison said. However, representatives for the virtual schools, which service about 7,200 students, according to the Indiana Department of Education, dispute that.

"The utter lack of communication with students and parents, miscommunication, and failure to adequately provide student services that we have seen over the course of the past week is simply unacceptable," he said.

"While we expect IVS and IVPA to fulfill all their obligations, student and educational services must take top priority and must be done with the highest level of care and professionalism. IVS and IVPA let their students down. There are many things that led us to this place, but that has been the most disappointing failure of them all."

Officials of the virtual schools have 15 days to respond to Daleville's notice of revocation.

They also will be allowed to make their case at a hearing in 30 days. No date or time has been set.

Daleville officials in February started considering revocation of the charters for a range of practices that were not considered in the best interests of students and resulted in abysmal graduation rates.

According to the timeline of an agreement reached in June between Daleville and the schools, IVS, established in 2012, is to cease operation as of Sept. 30, and IVPA, established nearly three years ago, would have been allowed to operate through June 30, 2020. The revocation affects primarily IVPA, which would cease operating at the same time as its sister school.

Under the agreement, IVA students would have been allowed to transfer to IVPA. The IDOE has issued guidance that would allow virtual school students to transfer to other schools even though their transcripts and record of credits have yet to be located.

Earlier this month, however, the virtual schools' operators were informed by the State Board of Accounts they may be held responsible for repaying up to $40 million in possible tuition overpayments for alleged overreporting of average daily membership.

ADM is the student population count that determines on a per-pupil basis how much the state will contribute for tuition.

Attorney Mary Jane LaPointe, who was retained Thursday to represent the foundation that operates the virtual schools, said their Superintendent Percy Clark was not in attendance at the meeting out of fear for what might happen. The meeting featured an unusually large law enforcement presence by Daleville police.

Though Garrison was clear he believed it was in the best interests of the virtual school students that they be transferred to other schools as soon as possible, LaPointe asked that the process not be rushed. She said closing the schools immediately would cause a crisis for parents and students.

Though no officials from the virtual schools or members of the public attended previous meetings, about a dozen people were in attendance Thursday. They included parents who represented both ends of the spectrum in terms of the schools' closure.

Angie Pogue, of Indianapolis, had to stop and collect herself as she dissolved into tears describing how the virtual schools helped her son, who is on the autism spectrum and was bullied in traditional public and private schools.

"This school has made it possible for him to continue his education," she said. "You are punishing students who have nothing to do with what is taking place. When you're on the autism spectrum, you just don't transfer that easily from one school setting to another."

However, Lisa Adams, of Anderson, said though the schools had a legal obligation under the agreement with Daleville to notify parents of the closure, she found out only by accident.

Adams said after she went onto the school's website to find a phone number so she could inquire about new classes, she made the decision immediately to transfer her son to Indiana Connections Academy.

1 arrest in clash of 200 near apartment

LOUISVILLE — One man has been arrested in a fight between about 200 people outside of an apartment complex. Vernon B. Carter III, 30, was arrested Thursday and charged with wanton endangerment and disorderly conduct. He was set to appear in court Friday. Louisville police responded early Thursday to a report of 200 "disorderly" people at the complex west of Louisville Muhammad Ali International Airport. An arrest report says officers arrived to hear gunshots as the group fled. It says Carter was seen fleeing with his hands behind his back and police determined he had a handgun. Carter told police that he had been visiting his girlfriend's apartment and tried to intervene in the fight, ultimately shooting into the air and crowd. No injuries were reported.

Labor Cabinet employee awarded $500K in firing

LOUISVILLE — A Kentucky jury awarded $500,000 to a former Labor Cabinet employee who said he was fired for reporting problems with an apprenticeship program promoted by Gov. Matt Bevin. Michael Donta was awarded $133,500 for lost wages Thursday, plus $366,500 in punitive damages. Donta's lawsuit says he was fired for reporting that Bevin's nursing apprenticeship program wasn't properly approved by federal labor officials. It's unclear if his claim is true, as the defense rejected it and the program appears on the labor department's apprenticeship finder website. Donta's termination letter says he was dismissed without cause. The jury rejected Donta's claim that he was also fired for reporting alleged sexual harassment by former director of the program, Winston Bennett. The Labor Cabinet says they're planning to appeal.

Baptist Convention chooses Gray as leader

LOUISVILLE — The Kentucky Baptist Convention Mission Board has chosen Todd Gray to lead the organization. Kentucky Today reports Gray was confirmed as executive director-treasurer during a special meeting Thursday in Louisville. Kentucky Today is a publication of the Kentucky Baptist Convention. The 54-year-old Gray is a Kentucky native and grew up in Lyon County. He was pastor at churches in Cadiz and Oak Grove in Kentucky and in Memphis, Indiana. He served the state organization as the West Regional consultant to 500 churches and for the last three years has been team leader for the Evangelism, Church Planting and Campus Ministry team. Gray said he's "grateful for the opportunity to serve" although he didn't aspire to the post. Gray succeeds Paul Chitwood, who resigned in November to oversee the Southern Baptist Convention's International Mission Board.

3 journalists win Gish awards for coverage

LEXINGTON — Three journalists who reported for decades on the coal industry and other issues in Appalachia are the winners of this year's Tom and Pat Gish Award. The winners announced this week are Ken Ward Jr. of the Charleston Gazette-Mail; the late Paul J. Nyden of the former Charleston Gazette; and Howard Berkes, who recently retired from National Public Radio. The award presented by the University of Kentucky's Institute for Rural Journalism and Community Issues recognizes "courage, tenacity and integrity in rural journalism." It's named for a tenacious newspaper publishing couple in Whitesburg, Kentucky. Al Cross, the institute's director, says the journalists "overcame adversity in reporting on coal and other topics in rural America." The Gish awards will be presented Sept. 26 in Lexington at the Al Smith Awards Dinner.

Murray State to offer 3 new programs

MURRAY — Murray State University is offering three new academic programs this fall. The school says in a statement that the new programs are part of its commitment to providing modern courses that incorporate real-world experience so that graduating students are ready for the workforce. The new programs include culture and language studies, human services and cybersecurity management. The university says students can earn bachelor's degrees in all three programs. Human services will be an online offering and the cybersecurity program will be part of the Center for Computer and Information Technology.

Braidy Industries attracts backers in mill

ASHLAND — Braidy Industries says hundreds of Kentuckians have become shareholders as the company lines up financing for a $1.7 billion aluminum mill in eastern Kentucky. The company says it recently completed the "crowdfunding" portion of its common stock offering, which was capped at just over $1 million worth of shares. Braidy CEO Craig Bouchard says Kentuckians make up an overwhelming majority of the 700 shareholders participating in the crowdfunding offering. Bouchard says he expects all necessary financing for the project to be obtained within a few months. United Co. Rusal, a Russian aluminum company, plans to invest $200 million in the project. Rusal was under U.S. sanctions until earlier this year. The proposed aluminum plant near Ashland is expected to create 550 jobs once production starts, expected in 2021.

Jefferson County begins 20-year planning

Courier staff report

Jefferson County will take the first steps this Tuesday night to make plans for what it wants to accomplish over the next 20 years.

The State of Indiana requires a comprehensive plan every 20 years for governmental entities to generate a vision that will become the blueprint for development and growth implementation strategies.

"We want to encourage and challenge our community to be active in the county's future and attend this upcoming workshop. We believe that everyone should have the opportunity to share their ideas for the future and help develop a vision and a plan for Jefferson County," said County Commissioner David Bramer.

During the next 10-12 months, Jefferson County will follow a process to fully update the previous comprehensive plan, which was completed in 1999 and adopted in 2003.

The comprehensive plan will include a countywide vision and implementation strategies for future development in such areas as transportation, parks and recreation, housing, education, community services, conservation, fire and protective services, mass transit, physical site conditions, residential liquid and solid waste treatment (such as sewers, recycling, trash collection), agricultural lands, forests, economic development, hospitals, and correctional institutions with an emphasis on quality of place and quality of life. The plans and projects included in the comprehensive plan will enable the county to pursue funding opportunities through state and federal grant programs.

The public workshop will be Tuesday, July 30, 2019, from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. in the lecture hall at Ivy Tech Community College's Madison campus, 590 Ivy Tech Drive. For more information, go to https://jeffersoncounty.in.gov/500/Comprehensive-Plan

The county explained in a news release that the comprehensive plan is not a zoning ordinance, nor a legally binding document. The county's plan will not cover the City of Madison nor the Town of Hanover because they are outside of the county's planning jurisdiction. But, the planning process will include interaction and collaboration with citizens and representatives from these municipalities to ensure the comprehensive plans provide continuity and complement each other where areas and goals overlap.

This planning process will include public engagement opportunities in each phase:

The public workshop Tuesday to gather ideas, feedback, and input from residents, business owners, property owners and all other interested parties is part of the first phase. The workshop will not include a formal presentation but will provide an open time in which attendees can arrive at any point and stay as long as needed. The intended goal of the workshop, Bramer said, is for citizens to provide their ideas on how to make Jefferson County a better place to live, work and play.

Those unable to attend the workshop are encouraged to contact their county representative to share ideas. An online survey will be available to allow everyone in Jefferson County to offer input into the new plan. The ideas will be included with those collected during the planning workshops.

A second workshop will be later in the year for the public to provide input on the plan recommendations. The Jefferson County Comprehensive Plan is expected to be completed next year and once adopted will be referenced and used by decision-makers as it relates to land use or other recommendations included in the plan.

421 project salvaged materials to be made available

By PEGGY VLEREBOME
Special to the Courier

More than a dozen materials salvaged before demolition of a house at 112 Sering St. to make room for the U.S. 421 New Road Project are available free to residents in downtown Madison's overlapping National Register of Historic Places and National Historic Landmark district.

"The items salvaged were those that had the most historic value and had the most potential for reuse in historic houses," according to the website for the project, which is construction of approach lanes to and from the Milton-Madison bridge and a T-shaped turnaround for garbage trucks off the alley behind 112 Sering St.

Preservation of the materials was part of an agreement allowing removal of the house because its removal might adversely affect the local historic district.

The Indiana Department of Transportation issued a public notice with instructions for how residents within the historic districts can apply for the salvaged materials for reuse on their houses.

The inventory of salvaged materials, with a map depicting the boundaries of the two historic districts, are available on INDOT's website: https://erms.indot.in.gov/Section106Documents/. The DES Number (1400918) is the easiest search term once on the website.

Residents interested in receiving salvaged materials should direct requests to INDOT's Patrick Carpenter at pacarpenter@indot.in.gov or (317) 233-2061. Requests should include the property owner's name and address, phone number and email address.

Once requests are received, INDOT will confirm that the applicant owns property within the historic districts and that the item is still available. If the item is available and residency is confirmed, INDOT will notify the requester with directions to view and pick up the requested items.

Any salvaged materials remaining after April 27, 2020, will be offered by INDOT and/or the City of Madison to the broader Madison/Jefferson County community or organizations such as Habitat for Humanity before disposal.

In accordance with the "Americans with Disabilities Act," if a person has a disability for which INDOT needs to provide accessibility to the document(s) such as interpreters or readers, contact Rickie Clark at (317) 232-6601 or rclark@indot.in.gov

The items, which Carpenter said will be given out first-come, first-served, are:

- One wood double-hung window, six panes over six panes, 62 inches by 34 inches
- Two wood double-hung windows, six panes over six panes, 68 inches by 35 inches
- One double-hung window, four panes over four panes, 100 inches by 34.5 inches
- One north living room door/transom window with screen, two-light (two openings), 36 inches by 14 inches
- One fixed (doesn't open) window transom, four-light (four openings), 59 inches by 12 inches
- One interior door transom, 36 inches by 14 inches
- One metal floor register 32 inches by 18 inches
- Two metal floor registers 14 inches by 10.5 inches
- One metal wall register, 14 inches by 10.5 inches
- One exterior wood-paneled door, 83 inches by 38 inches

In addition, some wood flooring; window, door and floor trim; and casings might be available, but Carpenter did not know if any could be salvaged. Contact him for information.

Luck returns to field as Colts open camp

By MICHAEL MAROT
AP Sports Writer

WESTFIELD — Andrew Luck felt like a different guy as he strolled down the tree-lined path to the Colts practice field Thursday.

The recently married quarterback and now expectant father made the short trek, confident in his surgically repaired right shoulder and football future.

And despite being limited to individual drills by a strained left calf as training camp opened, even the Indianapolis Colts quarterback took a few moments to reflect on how much has changed since he first appeared at Grand Park Sports Campus last July.

"I remember walking through that sort of tunnel in the trees. Today I was sitting there thinking about it and how scared I was to go practice and how nervous I was," Luck said.

"I had no idea what the heck was going to happen on this practice field. I remember it being a very powerful feeling and then feeling so happy and almost relieved like I'd survived. Survived practice. My arm is still attached to my shoulder. That's certainly a much different feeling this year."

Those initial fears gradually dissipated with a steady progression of successful steps — proving to himself the throwing arm could withstand the NFL rigors, leading the Colts back from a 1-5 start to end a three-year playoff drought and eventually winning the league's Comeback Player of the Year award.

Now Luck begins this season with another light workload.

In 2016, team officials rested Luck as part of an effort to protect the sore shoulder he initially injured in September 2015. After opting for surgery on the still-ailing shoulder in January 2017, Luck missed all of training camp — and the entire season. Last year, Luck slowly returned with coach Frank Reich and general manager Chris Ballard closely monitoring Luck's passing totals at camp to assure he'd be healthy for the season opener.

It worked.

This time, it's different.

Instead of talking about his arm, Luck has spent much of the offseason answering questions about the leg injury that kept him out of all of the team's offseason workouts this spring,

The final two rounds of the tournament will be held on Friday and Saturday.

Defying the Odds

Simon Detmer will not let CP slow him down

By ROB LAFARY
Courier Staff Writer
sports@madisoncourier.com

Having family originally from the area and having competed for three years in the Madison Courier Firecracker 10K race, Chicago native Simon Detmer knows all about Madison. Now it's time for Madison and the rest of the world to know about him.

Even with a life-altering disease, Detmer won't let it stop him from telling his story nor let it stop him from pursuing Olympic gold in two weeks.

Diagnosed with cerebral palsy at birth, Detmer has pursued a life of running despite the odds, and now the Calvin (Mich.) College runner will take to the international stage on Aug. 1, representing the United States in the 2019 World Para Athletics Junior Championships in Nottwill, Switzerland.

Detmer, one of 20 on the U.S. team, will take part in three events and is humbled by the opportunity to represent his country.

"This is a huge honor," Detmer said of being chosen to the team. "I'm overwhelmed with joy to represent my country at this stage and to have the chance to compete at the international level. I'm looking forward to making the most out of this moment and meeting other athletes who have overcome so much to reach this level alongside me."

Typically a runner in the 800- and 1500-meter runs, Detmer qualified for international competition away from those two — the 200- and 100-meter runs along with the long jump — and his performance in all three in May's Desert Challenge Games in Arizona sealed his selection to the U.S. team. Detmer knew his performances were a success, but his bid to Switzerland came as a shock.

"I knew I was in consideration but I never expected to be participating in those events," Detmer said. "It came as a big surprise that I was chosen for the three but I am just so fortunate to have the chance to compete. I really think there is a chance there to medal in the long jump and we will see what happens in the 100 and 200. My biggest goal is to try and medal in at least one event, but earn personal bests in all three."

After surviving a stroke within 24 hours of being born, Detmer's official diagnosis from doctors was right-side hemiplegia, a form of cerebral palsy that affects the right side of the body, causing such symptoms as partial paralysis along with muscle and coordination weakness and putting much reliance on the left side of the body.

All of those symptoms Detmer lives with on a daily basis but he prefers to look on the positive side. He's quick to point out the struggle, but even quicker to recognize the fact he's just lucky to be alive.

"It's great just to survive. I think it's something like 50 percent of newborns who suffer strokes die," Detmer notes. "I deal with muscle tension, muscle weakness, tremors and the partial paralysis but here I am and I'm alive. Physically it's challenging but I'm blessed to still be living life."

Despite those physical challenges, Detmer's positive outlook has

Grandal, Hader lift Brewers past Reds

By TOM KERTSCHER
Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Before setting their sights on a weekend series with the NL Central-leading Cubs, the Brewers had a most frustrating skid that needed addressed.

Ryan Braun and Keston Hiura homered, Yasmani Grandal hit a go-ahead single and Josh Hader made a lights-out relief appearance to lift the Brewers over the Cincinnati Reds 5-4 Wednesday.

Grandal delivered his two-run single in the fifth, Hader struck out five over two scoreless innings and Freddy Peralta pitched the ninth for his first save as Milwaukee avoided a three-game sweep and ended a five-game losing streak against Cincinnati.

Next up: three home games against Chicago beginning Friday.

"There are still 60 games left, we're not down to the wire," said Milwaukee manager Craig Counsell. "But it's an important series, for sure, it's against a team that's ahead of us. So, we want to keep ourselves right there."

With two on and two out in the fifth inning, Reds lefthander Amir Garrett walked Christian Yelich to load the bases. Grandal grounded a 3-2 fastball into left field, scoring two and putting the Brewers up.

Hader got the ball to Freddy Peralta, who pitched the ninth for his first save. Peralta has not allowed a run in his last five games, striking out 12 over 6 1/3 innings.

Reds center fielder Nick Senzel led off the game with a single but was replaced by Phillip Ervin. Senzel appeared to be woozy, and the team said he left due to illness. Senzel missed games this season and last season because of migraines or vertigo.

Josh VanMeter hit his second homer and Joey Votto and Scooter Gennett had RBI hits to help Cincinnati build a 4-2 lead against starter Jhoulys Chacin. Braun kept Milwaukee close with a two-run shot in the first, his 15th homer of the season.

The Brewers received a respite when Eugenio Suárez was given a planned day off, until he entered the game in the eighth and was struck out by Hader. Suárez has homered eight times in 16 games against Milwaukee this season, including two-run home runs in three consecutive at-bats over the first two games of the series.

Chacin hasn't won since April 30. He was pulled after three innings with right rib-cage discomfort. Matt Albers (5-3) got one out for the win.

Reds right-hander Lucas Sims (1-1), making his second start of the season and his first since May 28, gave up five runs on three hits in 4 2/3 innings, including the homers by Braun and Hiura. He retired 10 straight batters between the two home runs.

Sims made a flashy defensive play in the fifth, diving across the third base line to catch Tyler Saladino's foul bunt attempt.

TRAINER'S ROOM

Reds: C Juan Graterol was replaced during the third after a foul tip knocked his mask off. A trainer appeared to be examining Graterol's jaw. Bell said the team is still evaluating Graterol

HOT HITTER

VanMeter recorded a career-high three hits, with two RBIs. He is 6 for 12 since being recalled from Triple-A Louisville last Thursday, with two home runs and four RBIs.

UK's Robinson out

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky safety Davonte Robinson will miss the upcoming season because of a leg injury.

Coach Mark Stoops says Robinson injured his right quadriceps and will require surgery.

Robinson, a junior from Lexington, played in all 13 games last season, making 42 tackles, four pass breakups and two fumble recoveries. He started three games.

On the final play of the game at Florida, Robinson picked up a fumble and ran 30 yards for a touchdown, sealing the victory.

Big 12/SEC named

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Kentucky will visit 2019 NCAA Tournament runner-up Texas Tech and Kansas will host Tennessee on Jan. 25 as part of the seventh annual Big 12/SEC Challenge.

The other Jan. 25 matchups between these two conferences include Kansas State at Alabama, TCU at Arkansas, Iowa State at Auburn, Baylor at Florida, LSU at Texas, Mississippi State at Oklahoma, Missouri at West Virginia and Oklahoma State at Texas A&M.

Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina and Vanderbilt are the four SEC teams that won't be playing in this year's challenge.

This will mark the second straight year that Tennessee and Kansas have faced off. Kansas beat Tennessee 87-81 in overtime at the NIT Season Tip Off last year in New York.

The LSU-Texas game matches two coaches who used to work together. LSU coach Will Wade was an assistant on Texas coach Shaka Smart's staff at VCU from 2009-13.

U of L star injured

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Louisville freshman guard David Johnson will be out four to six months because of an injury to his left shoulder.

The university says Thursday that Johnson was hurt during practice Monday and will need surgery.

Coach Chris Mack calls it "tough news" but he expects the 6-foot-5 player to return in time to "impact our team this season."

Johnson was a four-year starter at Trinity High School in Louisville. During his senior year, he averaged 16.1 points, 7.2 rebounds and 4.0 assists and led the team to a 30-8 record and the Kentucky state championship.

USA Basketball updates team roster

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — USA Basketball's depth is already getting tested, weeks before the FIBA World Cup even starts.

The Americans released their updated national team roster Thursday, adding six players and deleting eight who removed themselves from consideration over the past several weeks. It means 17 players — barring any more additions or subtractions, both of which remain possible — are expected to vie for the 12 spots on the team that the U.S. will take to China for the World Cup next month.

The Americans are the two-time defending World Cup champions.

"Since USA Basketball started the men's national team program in 2006, we have understood the necessity of fluidity within the program and the importance of having a deep national team roster that features both young and veteran standout NBA players," said Jerry Colangelo, the men's national team managing director of USA Basketball.

Boston's Jaylen Brown and Marcus Smart, the Los Angeles Clippers' Montrezl Harrell, Denver's Mason Plumlee, New York's Julius Randle and Chicago's Thaddeus Young are the newest names on the roster. They'll all head to Las Vegas for training camp — the first to be led by new USA coach Gregg Popovich — starting Aug. 5.

Also on the national roster: Boston's Kemba Walker and Jayson Tatum, Toronto's Kyle Lowry, Milwaukee's Khris Middleton and Brook Lopez, Sacramento's Harrison Barnes, Detroit's Andre Drummond, the Los Angeles Lakers' Kyle Kuzma, Utah's Donovan Mitchell, Houston's P.J. Tucker and Indiana's Myles Turner.

The national team and select team players will play an exhibition game Aug. 9 in Las Vegas, before camp resumes the following week in El Segundo, California. The World Cup begins Aug. 31.

•Colts Camp

prevented him from working out with his teammates on the West Coast between June and July and now has limited his work early in camp.

Luck threw Thursday in individual drills and is expected to return to seven-on-seven work Friday. Reich said Luck's injury would be evaluated each day and hopes his starting quarterback is back in full action by early next week.

But with their preseason opener two weeks away and their regular-season opener more than six weeks away, nobody at Colts camp is panicked. Instead, they're playing it safe.

"When you don't go the whole spring, I just think it's the smart thing to do," Reich said. "We've got plenty of time. He's working hard, he's dialed in and he'll get plenty of reps out here."

Besides, the Colts have a pretty good idea of how Luck will play once he is healthy.

In his first season under Reich, Luck set career highs in attempts (630), completions (430), completion rate (67.3 percent) and quarterback rating (98.7) while being sacked a career-low 18 times. He flirted with career highs in yards passing (4,593) and touchdown passes (39) and finished with the second-lowest interception rate (2.34 percent) of his career.

He played in all 16 games for the first time since 2014 when he led the Colts to the AFC championship game, engineered a six-win improvement over 2017 and made his fourth Pro Bowl appearance.

The Colts encouraged Luck to take some well-deserved time off following their divisional-round loss to Kansas City, but sometime before the start of OTAs, Luck injured his lower left leg.

So he spent the spring studying playbooks, watching game tape and demonstrating his mastery of Reich's offense by explaining what he liked and didn't like last season, discussing adjustments and what could be changed in 2019.

"He had input last year, but it's not even close to the same level. We were installing it and it was more listening with a few comments here and there," Reich said.

"I think it has taken the meetings to a higher level and even when it's the quarterback meetings with (offensive coordinator) Nick (Sirianni), (quarterbacks coach) Marcus (Brady) and myself, but even in the offensive meetings. The voice he has in there making sure he is talking to receivers, tight ends, backs. He has had a real strong presence this offseason."

And it should give the Colts a leg up on their competition when Luck returns.

"You can go to bed saying, 'I wish I didn't pull my calf. I wish I didn't feel like this," Luck said. "I know anybody coming back from any type of injury, it's the same thing. You've got to keep working and getting better and trust that."

continued for a lifetime, to the point of embarking on a running career which runs in his family. His dad, Wayne Detmer Jr., a 1985 graduate of Madison Consolidated High School, is a record-holder in track and field and was a member of the Yale track and field team before entering the medical field where he now practices family medicine in Chicago.

That success has carried over from father to son. Even with his disease, Simon Detmer eventually built himself up mentally and physically, running cross country and track and field at Timothy Christian High School where he was a state finalist his senior year in cross country before earning a spot on the same teams at Calvin College. In the offseason in between, Detmer was named a 2018 U.S. Paralympics Track and Field High School All-American after competing in the Turnstone Endeavor Games.

But even those accomplishments weren't without perseverance through struggles and injury. With his right arm unable to move, Detmer has to propel off his left leg and vault with his right, creating an excruciating balancing act between trying not to overwork both his left and right sides.

"All eight semesters of high school I dealt with injuries," Detmer said. "The third race of my freshman year I fractured my fibula so I had to go through a lot of rehab, stretching, extra exercises, things like that. It was really disappointing but I felt like I was never told to stop. My friends and family continued to support me and I felt like the Lord was telling me to run. I was determined and motivated to use my gift of running to glorify him."

A broken foot prevented Detmer from running cross country at Calvin — an NCAA Division III school — this past year but his recovery allowed him to participate in track and field where he showcased his abilities during the indoor season. In April, he broke the National USA Adaptive Track and Field Under 20 age record in the 1500 run with a time of 4:51.04. The accomplishment earned him MIAA Men's Track Athlete of the Week honors.

Yet again though, injuries did their best to sideline Detmer but he overcame the odds to finish his spring strong before qualifying for his international challenge.

"I spent four to five months rehabbing my foot but started building back up for shorter distance races," Detmer said. "I kept developing injuries though and most recently have dealt with shin splints. I just continue to work out and build up my body as much as I can to overcome the toll on my body."

Detmer will be joined by his father, Wayne Jr., and mom, Gina, along with other family members when he heads to Switzerland next month. Their faith in him will light the ultimate Olympic torch as he prepares to set his mind on his goals when the first of August rolls around.

"My parents gave me the mentality growing up that I could do anything I set my mind to," Detmer said. "My family never said I can't and through the Lord I can do all things. I'm a competitive person with a purpose but I look forward to competing with others who share the same positive attitude as me."

Retail changes on Main Street

Wow! What a Find moving to 2 new spots; toy store coming

Courier staff report

Main Street in Madison soon will have a different look with an already established store moving into two new locations and a retail toy store from La Grange, Kentucky, moving to Main Street.

Wow! What a Find, an interior design-oriented store, will move from its location at 220 W. Main Street into two other locations on Main.

The Treasured Child, a toy store that has been in La Grange, will be moving into the 220 W. Main space.

Wow! What a Find was created by Patsy Schwartz and Robert Dean, who now operate the store. Their lease for the west Main location is up at the end of July. Schwartz and Dean decided to split their goods into two separate locations.

One location will be at 217 E. Main St., above The Primitive Porch. That store will sell much of the same upscale furniture and items that the store now sells on west Main.

The second location will be at 113 E. Main St. next to Ditto's On Main and will sell jewelry and other boutique-style items.

Both locations will open officially Aug. 10, but Schwartz said, customers are welcome to stop by before the opening to see how things are going. Until they close at the end of the month, Wow! What a Find will be have a final sale/sidewalk sale from noon to around 3 p.m. every day until Sunday, July 28 as packing for the move continues.

The Treasured Child closed its doors in La Grange July 24 and will re-open at 220 West Main on Friday, Sept. 13 at noon.

Toy store leaving La Grange Main Street for Madison Main Street

By AMANDA MANNING
The Oldham Era

The Treasured Child announced on Facebook last week they are expanding and moving to Madison, Indiana.

"We decided to move because of a larger tourism base," Tayler Rinehart, co-owner, manager and operator of The Treasured Child said. Rinehart co-owns the store with her parents Ellie and Randy Troutman.

"The amount of square footage we could purchase in Madison was reasonably priced and we're now able to go from 1,500 square feet to 8,000 square feet," Rinehart said.

Inside the larger space — which will host new and favorite toys — will be a section called "The Treasured Child." The store's new name will be announced on Facebook soon, Reinhart said.

She said the expansion will make the toy store more accessible for customers both inside and outside.

"The current toy store building in La Grange has always been a challenge for shoppers, it's so narrow that wheel chairs and strollers couldn't easily navigate," Rinehart explained.

"Parking in La Grange was the biggest concern from my customers, and in Madison, it's no longer a problem," she added.

Trish and Rick Garlock opened the toy store in La Grange in April 1997, according to a 2009 newspaper article.

On March 10, 2008, employee and retired teacher Donna Schwedler bought the business. Trish Garlock and Donna Schwedler have since died.

When the toy store went up for sale seven years ago, Rinehart said it was an easy choice for her family.

"We are avid, Barbie, Steiff and Breyer collectors and when the opportunity to purchase the store came up, it was a perfect fit for us," she said.

The family, who still owns 14 properties in La Grange according to Rinehart, said they hope to see the same shoppers in Madison.

"Thank you for years of shopping with us, we hope to see everyone in Madison," Rinehart said. "It's another great town."

The Treasured Child will close its doors in La Grange July 24. They will re-open at 220 West Main Street in Madison Sept. 13 at noon.

To find out about the new name, follow The Treasured on Facebook at facebook.com/thetreasuredchild

Brother-in-law is blind to alcohol issues, abuse to family

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: I'm writing because I hope the person this will help most will read it. My brother-in-law is an alcoholic and won't see that he has a problem. His youngest brother died of alcoholic hepatitis, and he is headed down the same path. He is also emotionally abusive to anyone in his family (though not friends or acquaintances) that comes in contact with him when he is drunk, and he's drunk more often than not. He has passed out on his dinner plate, fallen down in our driveway into the bushes, routinely passes out right after dinner and has driven while drunk (much to our chagrin). It is especially disturbing when he drunkenly screams at his own wife and his mother. It is typically a tirade of expletives. My husband has tried to get him to see that he has an issue. I have started attending Al-Anon, and I invited his wife and my mother-in-law, who both refuse to go.

I'm saddened that we have lost this person who once was good to be around. No one stops him when he gets abusive; no one corrects him or otherwise exposes him to any consequences for his actions. So, he continues to drink and to become emotionally abusive. He somehow maintains his friendships with his neighbors, who also don't discourage him from drinking, which is why he prefers being around them.

When I suggest that someone try to explain to him when he is sober what he does (he blacks out and claims to be unaware that he did these things), they say that it would only make it worse. I know we can't fix an alcoholic until he desires to change himself, but I want my mother-in-law to show him that there are consequences for his actions. When he gets this way, I want her or his wife to leave the dinner table, leave his house or otherwise let him know immediately that this behavior is unacceptable. They do not, and we all just sit there shaking, hearts racing, wondering if he will strike out physically next.

I can't stop going to dinners with my husband. We do limit time spent with my in-laws, but I am stumped as to what to say next time he gets belligerently drunk and starts in with his abusive tirades. Do we walk out leaving dinner on the table? Do we tell him we won't spend any time with him unless he gets help? Any suggestions from you or your readers would be appreciated. — Frustrated and Frazzled

Dear Frustrated and Frazzled: I'm so sorry to hear that the disease of alcoholism has your beloved brother-in-law in its grip, and I hope he'll find his way toward recovery eventually. In the meantime, excusing yourselves from social situations in which he begins getting drunk is a fine idea, and you should feel empowered to do that. As for telling him you won't spend any time with him unless he gets help: That, too, is a fine idea, provided the following: 1) You are making the ultimatum for yourselves, not because you hope to influence his behavior; 2) You are 100% sure that you and your husband both mean it; and 3) You and your husband are both willing to see it through.

You're absolutely right that family should stop shielding him from the consequences of his actions, as this only further enables his alcoholism. But you can't force your sister-in-law and mother-in-law to understand this; it's a conclusion they have to reach for themselves. I encourage you to continue to attend Al-Anon (or another program, such as Families Anonymous, and/or therapy) and to work with your husband to set boundaries between his brother and you two.

Lastly, when you know that he's getting behind the wheel of a car after drinking, take his keys (all sets), if possible; call 911 if not.

THE UNUSUAL PLAY HARD TO EXECUTE

Socrates said, "I cannot teach anyone anything. I can only make them think."

If that were true, everyone would have to work out everything for themselves -- what a waste of labor.

We have been examining the basics of defense for the last two weeks. Today, let's look at an important rule that is counterintuitive for many players, making it hard to do correctly.

How should the defense proceed against three no-trump after West leads his fourth-highest diamond?

It was a simple quantitative auction, the most common there is.

Third hand high is a cornerstone of defense, but it isn't always right. One of the hardest times to ignore it comes up in this deal. When third hand's highest card in the suit led is below the nine, he should give count. With two, signal high-low; but with three, play the lowest.

Here, after declarer covers West's diamond four with dummy's five, East must steel himself and follow suit with the three, not the six. Even if South takes the trick with dummy's five, it will not affect the number of tricks each side will win in the suit.

The big plus for the defense comes when declarer takes the first trick with his diamond jack, plays a spade to dummy's queen and runs the club queen to West's king. What happens next?

East has shown an odd number of diamonds. If it is one, the contract is probably laydown. West should assume that East has played low from a tripleton. Then West can cash the diamond ace to drop South's king. Thoughtful!
